

“Natural Gardening & Living Soils”

With Todd Breitenstein

This slide show & lecture provides inspiration and education on how to nurture the connections between plants and the microorganisms & fungi present in the soil for healthier more robust plants.

Our discussion will encourage understanding of the complex soil/plant/food web interactions that support garden biology naturally. The use of compost tea, biochar, soil inoculants, as well as understanding the advantageous use of native plants in biological communities will be discussed.

Known as The Grateful Gardener, Todd Breitenstein has been cultivating his passion for plants and the planet since he was a toddler in his family garden. Todd founded The Grateful Garden, a sustainable garden center with the tagline “We Grow Vegetable Gardeners,” where he nurtures soil, plants and the wellbeing of his community.
